TRANKRYPCJA NAGRAŃ

Zadanie 1

Have you ever heard of the concept of Danish hygge? What exactly is it and is it exportable? Let's find out.

The Danish word hygge comes from a Norwegian word meaning "well-being" and is usually translated into English as "cosiness". But it's much more than that, it's an entire attitude to life that helps Denmark to vie with Switzerland and Iceland to be the world's happiest country.

So what is hygge? It could be families and friends getting together for a meal surrounded by candles, or it could be time spent on your own reading a good book. What else? Eating home-made cinnamon pastries. Watching TV under a duvet. Tea served in a china set. Generally speaking, the idea is to relax and feel as at-home as possible, almost forgetting life's worries.

The high season of hygge is Christmas. Danish winters are known to be long and dark. This influences things. So the Danes fight the darkness with their best weapon: hygge, and the millions of candles that go with it. Hygge doesn't have to be a winter-only thing, other seasons' street festivals and bike rides, picnics in the park, barbeques with friends, outdoor concerts, can all be very hygge.

The rest of the world seems to be slowly waking up to what Danes have been wise to for generations. It means being kind to yourself. But to be more precise, it stands for indulging yourself, having a nice time and not punishing or denying yourself anything. All very useful when January comes and everyone starts their New Year's resolutions – diets, manically exercising or abstaining from alcohol.

To sum up, hygge's a pretty hard thing to describe because it's so abstract. It was never meant to be translated, it was meant to be felt and, indeed, it probably resonates with people from many countries, as they might easily get a sense of it.

Zadanie 2

For many of us, fandom is all about the music, but for others, loving a musician's work goes hand-in-hand with buying it in as many physical formats as possible, and also by amassing huge collections of memorabilia. In today's programme we pay tribute to the noble dedication of some of the world's most accomplished record and pop memorabilia collectors.

Let's start with Liz West. In July 1996, the Spice Girls' debut single Wannabe was released, and 11-year-old Liz West became hopelessly hooked on girl power. She immediately started collecting memorabilia, unopened and proudly displayed, boosted by helpful friends and family at birthdays and Christmases. However she didn't move into the big league until she began studying at Glasgow School of Art, when the recently introduced student loans enabled her to buy a top once owned by Mel C, one of the Spice Girls' members. West is now an independent artist and curator, and her collection, including Spice dolls, costumes, promotional items and more, holds the Guinness World Record for the most Spice Girls' memorabilia. It has become a touring exhibition that's visited cities around the country, drawing 50,000 visitors in Leeds alone.

And now let's move to a Brazilian mega-collector Zero Freitas. His music archive is acknowledged to be the world's largest, with more than 5 million records. Some of the treasures and oddities include every single record ever pressed in Cuba, over 15,000 polka albums, and 1,793 copies of the first album he ever bought, Roberto Carlos Sings to the Children. By the way – just in case you don't know it – Carlos is known as The King of Latin Music.

One of Freitas' closest competitors was US enthusiast and record shop owner Paul Mawhinney, whose collection was thought to number about 3 million records. When Mawhinney's shop, Record-Rama in Pittsburg, closed in 2008, he tried - and failed - to find a buyer for the full collection. Instead, he sold sections of his archive to separate buyers - until one man came in and bought what was left. That man was Zero Freitas.

Finally, we are truly inspired by Euromillions lottery winner Adrian Bayford from Suffolk. When he received his £149 million jackpot in 2012 (the second biggest win in UK history), he didn't think of speedboats or other top-end products. He made a decision to own the world's biggest collection of Lady Gaga memorabilia. Before winning, Bayford had owned a music shop, which he was forced to close. In June, he reopened as a memorabilia specialist, having spent £10,000 on some of Gaga's shoes, rare vinyl records and costumes to be the crown jewel of his new shop. He said that the Gaga collection was purely a tactical move, and he's no Little Monster as the fans of Lady Gaga are called. In fact he is a big rock fan and likes bands where people actually play instruments, like AC/DC, Aerosmith and Iron Maiden. Bayford also explains that he plans to look for independent, original musical talents and open a record-pressing plant for them.

So, you might be proud of the size of your record or memorabilia collection, but, you know, you'll need to visit a lot more car-boot sales to keep up with Liz, Zero and Adrian. OK, we'll be back after the break. Be sure to tune in!
